Dear Soborno:

It is wonderful to receive an update from you on your many accomplishments and projects, and it's exciting to hear how your projects have evolved in the last two years. I am so pleased to hear that you are exploring not only math and science through the creation of your humanoid robot, Nazrul, but also that now you are writing about tolerance, love, understanding, and the importance of shared dialogue among all people and religions.

Since I get many requests for introductions for books, I make it my policy not to write introductions. However, I would very much like to read your book once it is complete.

I also want to introduce you, by way of this note, to the University of Pennsylvania's Chaplain, Charles Howard. I think he would be interested in your book as well. He is an alumnus of the University of Pennsylvania and directs the Office of the Chaplain and the Spiritual and Religious Life Center at Penn.

Soborno, our country is blessed to have young people with such talent and commitment to their ideals--I wish you nothing but continued progress in your endeavors. Continue to dream big dreams, and last but not least, happy sixth birthday to you!

Sincerely,

Dear Soborno:

Thank you for writing and sharing with me your many accomplishments at such a young age. I hope you take pride in all that you have worked so hard to learn.

I'd be happy to learn more about your campaign, "Let's Fall in Love with Math and Science." Please feel free to send any materials along to my office.

Our country is fortunate to have students such as you who study hard and dream big dreams. You are tomorrow's leaders, and you are inspiring. Happy birthday, Soborno!

Sincerely,
